THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Founded 1858 · Incorporated 1865

Broadway Between 155th and 156th Streets
New York, N.Y. 10032

PURPOSES: The Society was founded for the collection and preservation of coins, medals, decorations and paper money and for the investigation of their history and other subjects connected therewith.

MEMBERSHIP: Applications for membership are welcomed from all interested in numismatics. Inquiries regarding membership should be addressed to the Secretary of the Society.

DUES: The annual dues for an Associate Membership are fifteen dollars. Issues of the Notes and Monographs, Museum Notes and Numismatic Literature are distributed to all members.

PUBLICATIONS: The American Numismatic Society Museum Notes is a scholarly journal containing articles on numismatic topics. The Numismatic Notes and Monographs consist of separately issued publications, each on a single topic. Numismatic Studies is a series accommodating works in a larger format. Numismatic Literature, published twice each year, is an international abstract bibliography of the current literature in the profession. The Society is also engaged in the systematic publication of its entire Greek coin collection in Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum: American Numismatic Society.

MUSEUM: The Society maintains a museum located in uptown Manhattan, New York City, which houses its offices, collections and library. Collections embrace coins of all periods from their inception to modern times, medals and decorations. Selections from its cabinets are on display in an exhibition. The library, consisting of about 25,000 volumes, covers all branches of numismatics.

The museum is open to Members and the public from 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. In addition, the public exhibition is open on Sundays from 1 to 4 P.M. The museum is closed on Mondays and the following holidays: New Year's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Independence Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Friday in November, the fourth Saturday in November, December 24, Christmas Day. The public exhibition is open from 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on the fourth Friday and the fourth Saturday of November.

PREFACE

Numismatic Literature is a semiannual survey of current publications in or related to numismatics, with abstracts of their contents. Beginning with NL No. 79 (December 1967), bibliographic information and abstracts have been submitted by an international board of contributing editors, each of whom collects material published in his country. The contents and quality of NL reflect the participation of this editorial board and of individual scholars, whose cooperation can create a truly comprehensive bibliographic tool.

The revisions in format introduced in NL 81 have been maintained, to enable each reader to find and use material in his own field more easily, while benefitting from work published in peripheral fields. Each issue of NL is now paged separately, rather than consecutively within each issue, and an abstract can therefore be identified by the issue number together with the abstract number, for example, 81-1. Most entries are grouped under broad cultural, geographical or typological sections. In addition, the section Technology and Methodology lists works in which recently developed techniques for numismatic study are described or significantly applied. The Greek section correlates with the broad definition of Head's Historia Numorum. At the end of each section is a list of numbered cross references to abstracts with related material in other sections.

Author and subject indices are published at the back of each issue. The author index does not include references to the reviews, which are themselves alphabetically arranged by author. The hoard list is a separate list of abstracts in which reference is made to coin hoards.

Periodical titles are abbreviated whenever possible. A cumulative list of periodical title abbreviations is published in the March issue of even-numbered years. Intervening issues contain a cumulative list of additions. In this way, the list should become a record of the periodical publications in many fields in which numismatic material appears, and a convenient compilation of abbreviations for scholars.

Although NL is a bibliography of current publications, an effort is being made to include notices of somewhat older publications which are not readily available, or are published in languages which readers are not likely to know, and which were not discovered until the institution of the international board of contributing editors.

Comments and suggestions for improvement are welcome, and may be addressed to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society. The Editor thanks all those who have contributed to NL, and hopes that participation will continue to grow.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

The Contributing Editors listed below provide the international cooperation necessary for the publication of Numismatic Literature. Each Contributing Editor has assumed the responsibility for collecting and forwarding to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society titles and abstracts of all works of serious numismatic interest published in his area. In order that NL may offer the most complete, accurate and current coverage possible, each author is strongly urged to prepare an abstract of his own work at the time of publication, and to send it to the Contributing Editor of the country in which the work was published. A guide for the preparation of abstracts follows the list of Contributing Editors.

GUIDE FOR ABSTRACTORS

Entries in Numismatic Literature generally consist of two parts, the bibliographic information and the abstract.

Bibliographic Information

All entries must include the following information:

1. The full name(s) of the author(s)
2. The title of the publication in the original language, but in the Roman alphabet. If the publication is not written in English, French, German or Italian, the original title should be followed by a translation into one of these languages.

If the publication is an article in a journal, the following information must also be given:

3. Volume and/or issue number
4. Date of the journal
5. Date of publication, if it is different from the date of the journal
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is an article in a book of collected works, such as a Festschrift or proceedings of a congress, the following information must also be given:

3. Complete title of the collection
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is a book, the following information must also be given:

3. Edition number and editor's name, if any
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Total number of pages
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the content of the publication is general in nature and does not include specific information or arguments which should be brought to the reader's attention, and the title is fully descriptive of the contents, the bibliographic information alone may be given and the abstract omitted.

The Abstract

Definition. An abstract is a concise, objective summary or description of the content of a publication. It is different from a review in that an abstract does not offer critical comment or additions to the original work.
Length. Abstracts may be from about 50 to 200 words in length, depending upon the importance or complexity of the publication. A long abstract may be desirable when the original publication is not readily available, or is written in a language most readers are not likely to know.
Style and Language. Abstracts should be written in complete sentences. They may be submitted in English, French, German or Italian, but will be published in English. All abstracts must include the typewritten, full name of the abstractor.

Non-Current Titles

The International Editor of Numismatic Literature maintains a control file, grouped by country of publication, of all new title cards entered into the Society's library card catalogue. Cards are removed from this control file as the relevant titles are received from the Contributing Editors. Title cards in the control file are published as they become three years old in order to prevent omission of these titles. Publication of such entries is necessarily limited to bibliographical information only.

NOTE TO CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

Abstracts intended for publication in the March 1981 issue of Numismatic Literature should be received at the editorial office of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway at 155th Street, New York, N.Y. 10032, not later than November 15, 1980.

GENERAL

1 ARCHIBALD, MARION M.; METCALF, D.M. and RIGOLD, STUART E. The Coins, Counters and Tokens. St. Peter's Street, Northampton Excavations 1973-76. By J.H. Williams (Northampton Development Corporation, Archaeological Monograph No. 2) (Northampton, 1979) pp. 243-47 illus.

The following coins were found: five Roman, one of Carausius and four of the fourth century A.D.; one Anglo-Saxon sceatta ca. 735; eight Anglo-Saxon pennies; 15 English coins, ranging from Stephen to George II; two "Medley halfpennies"; a Victorian farthing and a ten centime of Napoleon III. Seven jetons (England, France, Franco-German border and Nuremberg), a seventeenth century farthing token of Northampton, and a "To Hanover" counter were also found. (E. Marles)

In 1897, the collection included 725 ancient, Greek, Eastern and Byzantine coins. (Bucur Mitrea)

3 BAR, MARC. Réflexions à propos des dates sur les monnaies. CENB Vol. 17 No. 1 (Jan.-March 1980) pp. 4-15.

The different ways in which dates on coins were marked from antiquity until the French Revolution are reviewed. (Simone Scheers)

4 BULLMORE, G.H.L. Proving Pieces of Greenwood and Batley. NCirc Vol. 87 No. 10 (Oct. 1979) pp. 438-40 illus.

In F.F. Pridmore's article (see NL 55 [Apr. 1961] p. 481) attention was drawn to these unusual pieces. The information relative to samples by Greenwood and Batley is extended here by the inclusion of additional specimens. The term "Machine Manufacturers' Proving Samples" is suggested as a standard term for this group of numismatic specimens. (Author)

15 EPSTEIN, JEREMIAH F. Pre-Columbian Old World Coins in America: an Examination of the Evidence. Current Anthropology Vol. 21 No. 1 (Chicago, Feb. 1980) pp. 1-20, tables. With comments by Donal B. Buchanan, T.V. Buttrey, George F. Carter, Cyclone Covey, Thomas A. Lee, Jr., Balaji Mundkur, Allison Paulsen, Hanns J. Prem, Jonathan E. Reyman, Miguel Rivera Dorado, and Norman Totten.

Reported finds of pre-Columbian coins in North America are described and classified, and their behavior is compared with that of Chinese coins found in the Northwest, where there was extensive contact between the Coast tribes and the Orient. It is concluded that no find of an Old World coin is sufficiently well documented to provide evidence for pre-Columbian contact. (William E. Metcalf)

Coins from a Macedonian hoard and from the Veroia (Macedonia) hoard, both dated to A.D. 310, are so similar and present such a characteristic patina that they must come from the same hoard. Coins from both parts of the hoard have been submitted to statistical analysis which substantiates this theory. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

The coins of the island of Skyros are studied in the light of the modern forgeries made by Christodoulos. Ten specimens are clearly fakes or at least doubtful, whereas 28 pieces, tetradrachms, didrachms, tetrobols, diobols and hemiobols of Attic-Euboean standard, are to be regarded as authentic. The silver was imported from northern Greece, and there are overstrikes on tetradrachms of Acanthus. The ancient coins were minted ca. 485-480 B.C. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

The hoard of Ognina, mainly tetradrachms and didrachms of Sicilian towns minting in the fifth century, is reconstructed and studied. One of Choirion's tetradrachms of Catana, which were minted in or shortly before 402, and two Kimon tetradrachms of Syracuse, which are to be dated ca. 405, give the date of the deposit of the hoard: shortly before or ca. 400 B.C. at the latest. Two staters of Ambracia and five tetradrachms of Athens which were incorporated into the hoard are compatible with this date. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

There is need for an analytical study of countermarks which would connect them in each case to the particular situations which engendered them. A further issue is the phenomenon of "disfiguration" of coin types which must be interpreted as a deliberate suppression of the original title of the Greek type by its new eastern holder, in an area not yet accustomed to the use of coinage. Three clay molds for the casting of folles of Maximian and Maximinus have been acquired in Egypt. The question of the casting of coin in fourth century Egypt is reexamined in the light of the economic situation. Study indicates that the cast coin is not false and that it apparently served the needs of small local markets and was related to the presence of military posts. See also NL 104-67. (Sara Sorda)

109 GARA, ALESSANDRA. Prosdiagraphomena e circolazione monetaria (Testi e documenti per lo studio dell'antichità Vol. 56). Milan, Cisalpino-Goliardica 1976. 203 pp.

The term prosdiagraphomena is explained by lexical comparisons and legal use as a supplement required by the Egyptian authorities to bring up to value the money used in payment of duties to that required by the central authority. It grows from the need to bring various forms of specie of differing nominal value into conformity with the new official valuation of the tetradrachm (whether Ptolemaic or Roman). Moreover, duties had to be paid in tetradrachms because they represented the equivalent of the Roman denarius, which was the only money acceptable in all the provinces for the payment of taxes. Two fourth century B.C. issues of Syracuse bear the head of Zeus on the obverse and an inscription designating him as ELEUTHERIOS. The two representations are different: the one on bronze has short hair, a long beard, and an olive branch as crown; the other, on all three metals, has long hair bound by three olive branches. The chronology is controversial. The staters of Elis-Olympia and the information resulting from the Gela excavations are used to suggest that the first series is to be dated to 343 B.C., the second to 339/8 B.C. (Sara Sorda)

A review of the studies on the origin of coinage leads to the conclusion that coins were first invented in Lydia and Ionia, in order to guarantee with a seal the value of the natural electrum whose circulation was compromised by the variability of the alloy. Subsequent diffusion of coinage in Greece is tied to the cities' need to recoup the silver used for payments. The coin type indicated the circulation area within which the particular coin was preferred. (Sara Sorda)

Coins with the head of Melkart-Herakles/horse's head and palm tree are divided into two groups. The first has a forceful character and bears the inscription 'MMHNT or, more frequently, MHMHNT; the second is simpler and more austere in style and bears the inscription MHSBM. The date of these issues must be contemporary with Agathocles' coins with Nike erecting a trophy, ca. 300-289 B.C. More recent is the next series of primarily large flat coins with the head of Kore/prancing horse or horse head, or winged horse. Their style dates them to the early years of the First Punic War, ca. 264 B.C. They were apparently minted in Sicily. A note on ṢYṢ meaning Panormus, a summary of hoards, addenda, and an index of specimens are included. See also NL 91-106, 99-159, 101-197. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

122 JONES, NICHOLAS F. The Autonomous Wreathed Tetradrachms of Magnesia-on-Maeander. ANSMN Vol. 24 (1979) pp. 63-109 illus.

The second century B.C. stephanophoroi, or "wreath-bearing" tetradrachms, are studied using 243 specimens including 148 coins from the Kirikhan hoard of 1972. The die study establishes the sequence of emissions of the issues and the hoard evidence, which is supported by epigraphic testimony, yields a range for the entire series of ca. 155 B.C. to ca. 140 B.C. The significance of the eight reverse signatures is also examined and it is suggested that the signatures commemorate an extraordinary "monetary" liturgy. Support is adduced from an inscription from Sestos (W. Dittenberger, Orientis Graeci Inscriptiones Selectae, No. 339) that provides the first evidence for the liturgy anywhere in Greece. The historical context of the series is examined and it is hypothesized that the Asian free cities began striking the large silver in response to Pergamon's inauguration of a discriminatory economic policy, as evidenced in the introduction of the cistophorus: the free cities struck new silver in order to redirect their trade to other, more attractive markets. Ambracia began to strike coinage again after an interval of a few decades following 479 B.C. The first emissions of this group are studied by means of stylistic connections with contemporaneous issues of Corinth, Leucas, Corcyra and other minor mints. The coinage is used in a consideration of the economic prosperity of Poseidonia in 480-470 B.C. Comparison of the hoard evidence from Velia and Poseidonia suggests that Velia was in conflict with a still-flourishing Poseidonia and with the Lucani at this time. In the fourth century, however, Velia, in much the position of Naples, was expanding economically and technically into a hinterland already subject to Lucanian influence. (Sara Sorda)

162 PRICE, MARTIN J. In Search of Alexander the Great. NomKhron Vols. 5-6 (1978) pp. 27-34 illus.

The most varied coinage of the Greek world was struck in the name of Alexander the Great for a period of more than 200 years at more than 100 mints stretching from Macedonia to Iran. Before the coins can properly be used as historical documents, it is essential to identify the mints and times when the coins were struck. The symbols and monograms which accompany the main types and the style of the coins themselves are the two kinds of evidence on which such attributions must be based. The large number of hoards recorded enables the coins to be dated quite closely, even when the mint city is not known.

Egypt occupied an isolated position in relation to the rest of the Roman Empire: she circulated her own coinage, struck at the mint at Alexandria, a coinage which did not circulate outside her own borders just as Roman Imperial and senatorial coinage did not circulate in Egypt. Nevertheless, the existence of a fiduciary coinage which effectively controlled the rate of exchange permitted the maintenance of stable prices in an essentially agrarian economy. The situation deteriorated in the middle of the fourth decade of the second century. (Sara Sorda)

A systematic study of numismatics in Spain is presented from its inception through the Greek and early Roman periods. A methodology is established for the study of minting techniques, style, metrology, statistics, language and epigraphy, and coin finds. A chronological description of 1,100 issues serves to elucidate the problems inherent in Hispanic coinage up to the era of Claudius. Several indexes and a bibliography are included. (Author)

A hoard of 136 bronze coins of Ptolemy II, Ptolemy III and Ptolemy IV from the Egyptian Delta is examined. The composition of the assemblage is strictly similar to that of M. Thompson, O. Mørkholm, C.M. Kraay, An Inventory of Greek Coin Hoards, nos. 1691, 1696-1700; both the distribution of issues and the gradation of wear suggest a burial date in the last decade of the third century B.C. The surviving pieces include a specimen of Ptolemy III not found in recorded hoards (type:

The ancient comprehension of an image was superstitiously and magically formed by relating the image itself to its representation. This representation acts as a substitute for the original archetype and shows a different form of reality. This comprehension is well documented during late antiquity in official life as well as in magical practice. An emphasis on a person's position or office against his mere personality is documented for this epoch. Pictorial representations could, therefore, replace effigies of the emperor and other dignitaries. In the Carolingian period the Byzantine practice of pictorial adoration was rejected as non-Christian which demonstrates how far the Byzantine mentality was from the Frankish West. (Author)

From A.D. 64 imitations filled the need for small change which arose from the closing of the mint of Lyon. They were made throughout Britain, on the Rhine and in Gaul, and were recognized by local governors and circulated at a value equal to that of the pieces they imitated. From ca. 270-75 to the end of the third century, the majority of the imitations were antoniniani and minimi, especially throughout Britain and Gaul. The antoniniani were cut into four parts, which became four minimi. (Sara Sorda)

223 BRUUN, PATRICK. The Successive Monetary Reforms of Diocletian. ANSMN Vol. 24 (1979) pp. 129-48 illus.

Using the coinages of Siscia and Heraclea as evidence, it is contended that the first Diocletianic monetary reform, introducing the nummus, was carried out gradually (from A.D. 293) and not simultaneously in all parts of the Empire. As a consequence, the production of nummi did not necessarily interrupt the production of antoniniani, which were expected to circulate together with the new coins. Only the second phase of the reform, in A.D. 301, aimed at removing the antoniniani. An analysis of the argentei of the tetrarchic silver coinage is adduced in support of the gradual reforms of the monetary system; it is suggested that the main varieties of the type "four at sacrifice" and the camp gate reverse were introduced contemporaneously at the mints active at the time of issue. The argentei of the "four at sacrifice" type are generally dated to A.D. 293-97, the "camp gate with four turrets" to A.D. 303-5. The view that no argentei were struck in the last years of the First Tetrarchy, therefore, is challenged. (Author)

the site of ancient Burdigala (Bordeaux, France), principally in the necropolis of Saint Seurin. More than a third of them are imitation issues struck between 353-64 even though certain of the billon issues which served as models were issued between 330-46. The crisis of 301 caused a fall in silver and a greater one in gold. Bronze, however, was manipulated by the state and overvalued. After 318 the nummus was broadly circulated and it too progressively lost weight. The centenionalis was introduced about 348. At this time, as the texts indicate, there was a considerable rise in prices everywhere, without distinction between Egypt and the West. Nevertheless, the centenionalis did not disappear: in 395 it was monopolizing the market, in the form of *Aes*3. (Sara Sorda)

A treasure of 102 aurei and 17 gold multiples reportedly recovered from a wreck in the Mediterranean is catalogued and discussed. Apart from a single aureus of Probus, the coins and medallions are of the First, Second and Third Tetrarchies, and of the Maxentian period. Many are new and unpublished except for their inclusion in RIC Vol. VI. The 53 pieces of the Maxentian period include most of the multiples, and this portion at least appears to represent a donativum. The absence of any coins from the mint of Ostia and the internal evidence of the coins and multiples suggest that the treasure was closed in A.D. 308, and that part of it may derive from a donativum on the occasion of Maxentius' consulship in April, 308. 233 CASEY, P.J. Magnus Maximus in Britain. The End of Roman Britain. Edited by P.J. Casey (British Archaeological Reports, British Series No. 71) (Oxford 1979) pp. 66-79 illus.

A reassessment of the position of Magnus Maximus in relation to Britain is offered, suggesting that a revision of his role is needed in the light of literary and numismatic evidence. It is argued that the second issue of coins by Maximus at the London mint is associated with a visit by him to Britain in 384 after he had established his court at Trier.

Historiographic tradition associates the devaluations at Rome with well-determined causes and effects: on the one hand, lack of precious metal, growing needs of the state, need for currency tied to urbanization; on the other, variation in weight and fineness of the coins, growth in circulating medium, variation in prices. The state responded to this situation by reorganizing its outlays for military and civic expenditures, and its fiscal income. (Sara Sorda)

The devaluations at Rome from the beginnings of coinage to the reign of Constantine fall into two categories: reduction of the metallic content of a denomination, and reduction of its face value. The first case is likely to cause public distrust, with the earlier, better coins consequently being withdrawn and melted; the second results from public distrust and recognizes an unofficial devaluation already in existence. The factors that governed the production and circulation of bronze coinage in the late Roman Empire are discussed. Assemblages of coins from a number of excavated sites as well as hoards are considered. Although the eastern empire is included, the study stresses Britain, Gaul and Germany. It is argued that minting and the changing patterns of circulation were as much influenced by the developing character of regional economies as by the needs of the Imperial government to pay its debts. The gross pay of the Roman soldier did not rise between the times of Polybius and Caesar, in spite of inflation. The insufficiency of military pay was perhaps noticed less because of the progressive proletariatazation of the army and especially, after 107 B.C., because of the use of spoils, donatives, and rewards in land or in money. After 30 B.C. Augustus tried to satisfy the veterans with assignments of land or distributions of money in order to avoid a raise in pay. Domitian raised the pay to 300 denarii per annum, but he simultaneously reduced the roll of the troops. (Sara Sorda)

Comparison of Diocletian's Edict (301) with the custom tariffs of Zarai and Lambaesis indicates a continuity in the editing of economic documents which stretches over a century. It also reveals that these modest customs lists were the model for the composition of the Edict of Prices, a document unknown in the Roman world until the age of the Tetrarchs. (Sara Sorda)

A discussion of the end of Roman Britain asserts that it forms part of the general "fall of the Roman Empire." Britain, like other provinces, suffered from the inadequacy of the imperial armies, fiscal pressure, and its repudiation of Roman authority. Once Britain ceased to be a Roman province it no longer received supplies of coin and it reverted to a coinless economy, perhaps because the need for coined money disappeared with the Roman fiscal system. Until the end of the second century, the Flavian era shows monetary stabilization and development. The monetary policy of Vespasian, Titus and Domitian inclined toward the creation of a unified market for the whole Imperium. Oriental minting, except for Alexandria, was limited. Almost the entire production of coins was concentrated in Rome and the number of issues increased, especially of quinarii, semises and quadrans. Bronze cast coins and countermarked coins virtually disappeared. (Marta Męclewska)

Study of the issues from these sites clarifies the picture of monetary circulation which is given by the hoards buried in northern Gaul in the second half of the third century. The representation of the mint of Rome is almost equivalent to that of the mints of the Gallic emperors while in the hoards the latter predominate. Local imitations are found in considerable numbers in the sites as well as in the hoards. Aurelian and Probus are well represented in the sites which, by contrast, are poor in coins of Carus and of his family and also in antoniniani of Diocletian and his co-rulers. (Hélène Huvelin)]

In the era of Polybius, soldiers received two obols (equal to a quarter denarius or a sestertius) per day. The revaluation of the quadrigatus in terms of asses and the general reassessment of the relative values of different metals broke down the parallelism between Roman gold and Etruscan coinage with signs of value. The incidence of monetary devaluations is studied with respect to the census system, from the time when this began to be reported in monetary sums. At the beginning of the First Punic War the system was based on a scale which extended from 12,500 to 100,000 asses, and was retained unaltered until ca. 179 B.C. when the census of the first class was raised to 120,000 asses. Before 129 B.C., the census of the fifth class was set at 1,500 asses. The relationship between the introduction of the sestertius as the unit of account and the equestrian census is analyzed. The first appearances of the goddess Venus on denarii of the second century were connected with the political ambition of the nobles who wanted to claim direct descent from the Trojans. Only from Sulla onward was Venus used on the coins to indicate personal power, and the example was followed by Caesar, Pompey, and Octavian/Augustus. (Sara Sorda)

The type of Venus appears almost exclusively on coins of the empresses. The motivations for its appearance were varied: the desire to associate oneself with Caesar and Augustus (Vespasian/Titus, Trajan); dynastic assertions (Domitian, the Antonines); celebration of Venus as progenetrix of the Imperial family (Hadrian); celebration of the centenary of Rome (Antoninus Pius). the majority were corroded with the design, legend and die axis obliterated. Of the 355 coins listed as obverse and reverse not distinguishable, many showed some indication of being VICTORIA or SALVS types of the late fourth century. The proportion of barbarous coins may be higher than indicated in the list for only coins showing clearly barbarous features were so listed. The coins were chance losses and the small coins and large issues were well represented with very few of the larger, more valuable coins. Metrological analysis shows a constant uniformity of weight in all the issues in precious metals. This was due to the strict controls exercised by the princeps. It is suggested that the aurei of the Gallic empire, which were often found in the richest burials in Thuringia as oboli and single finds, were soldiers' pay of the ingentia auxilia Germanorum. The burials at Hassleben-Leuna must therefore be dated in the last 30 years of the third century. Aurei from Caracalla to Tetricus found between the Weser and Weichsel rivers are listed. Coins struck for Valerian, showing the prince with head shaved except for the lock of Horus, testify to the diffusion at Rome of the Alexandrian religion (and in particular Isiac) at the middle of the third century. The coins also represent one form of the dynastic propaganda of Valerian and Gallienus, tied to the idea of an hereditary monarchy of oriental type, which had already been proposed by many emperors and which found its culmination in Caracalla. In the Byzantine world the connection between coin types and the official attitudes of the monarch is evident. Between Tiberius II Constantine and Leo III Isauricus (first issue) emphasis is on the transcendental basis of the authority of the sovereign in his capacity as vicar of Christ. Subsequent issues reflect the iconoclast ideology and substitute the figure of the emperor for any religious motif. Similarly in the coinage of the Longobard Duchy of Beneventum (whose beginnings should be dated between 659 and 668) the connections of subjection, tension, and opposition vis-à-vis the Byzantine Empire and other powers are reflected from time to time. The solidus D. THEODEBERTUS REX/PAX ET LIBERTAS, Victory on the left holding a large cross, with gown turned up and right leg raised, was struck at Marseille by Theodebertus between 546 and 548. The legend on the reverse, borrowed from Roman ideology, is an appeal for the liberation of the peoples of Italy and Greece, launched by the minister Parthenius against Justinian and his barbarous allies. A hoard of 76 dirhams ranging in date from 85 H./A.D. 704 to 177/793-94 was found at Nippur, Iraq, during the 1973 excavations. Most of the dirhams were from Iraq and western Iran, but five, including the latest in date, came from North Africa. Dynasties represented were the 'Abbāsids, including one Arab-Sāsānian coin from Ṭabaristān, the Umayyads, and the Idrīsids. The coins were found in stacks wrapped in cloth. (Author)

448 BATES, MICHAEL L. Islamic Numismatics. Sections 1 and 2. Middle East Studies Association Bulletin Vol. 12 No. 2 (New York, May 1978) pp. 1-16; Section 3. Vol. 12 No. 3 (New York, Dec. 1978) pp. 2-18; Section 4. Vol. 13 No. 1 (New York, July 1979) pp. 3-21; Section 4 (cont.). Vol. 13 No. 2 (New York, Dec. 1979) pp. 1-19.

The state of the art in the study of Islamic numismatics is described. Section 1 deals with general reference works, including surveys, bibliographies, handbooks, mint lists, and general mediaeval works. Research and study facilities are treated in section 2 which lists and describes the major public collections of Islamic coins in North America and the world. Section 3 describes the state of the art in scholarship on general problems in Islamic numismatics, including research on inscriptions (epigraphy, mint names, rulers' names, and religious statements), on images and ornaments, on die studies, hoards and metrology and fineness. Studies of Islamic mints, their technology and administration, and of Islamic monetary history are also listed and evaluated, with suggestions for future study. Section 4 deals with studies of the numismatics of particular series within Islamic numismatics. Within broad chronological periods, the treatment is regional. The first installment evaluates publications on the era of the Rāshidūn and Umayyad caliphs (A.D. 632-750), the period of the 'Abbāsid caliphate and its contemporaries (A.D. 750-946), and the autonomous regional dynasties (A.D. 946-1250). The second installment of section 4 treats specialized studies of the late mediaeval dynasties, A.D. 1250-1517, and the early modern empires from about 1517 to the advent of machine struck coinage. The work of a die engraver named al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad is delineated through a study of Būyid dirhams of the mid-fourth century Hijra. Three coins are presented which bear his signature: the first (Iṣbahān 358) was published by G. Miles in 1938; the second was struck

450 BROOME, M.R. The Silver Coins of Baybars I without Mint Name. ANSMN Vol. 24 (1979) pp. 219-23.

An attribution is proposed for the mintless coins of Baybars I that would fill the gap between the known dated coins of Damascus and Hamah. The attribution is based on the die links and mules recorded from a new hoard of Ayyūbid and Mamluk silver coins, many from Hamah. Three Damascus half-dirhams from special dies are published and a sequence is proposed based on the supposition that all similar pieces come from Damascus, other than one rare issue that could have been minted at Hamah. during the Siege of Jerusalem 1187. NC Ser. 7 Vol. 19 (1979) pp. 122-32 illus.

Three unrecorded and crudely executed Crusader billon deniers published in 1965 and 1969 were unattributable since the legends were illegible and the designs uncertain. The discovery of a more legible example allows a reassessment of the issue. The four specimens are discussed and compared with three religious seals from the Latin Kingdom and two city plans of Jerusalem; except for one of the seals (1137), all are from the 1170s. Iconographic parallels exist between the designs of the Tower of David and the Holy Sepulcher on the seals and plans, and on the coins. The coin types are reinforced by the reconstructed legends. Metallurgical analysis of one specimen shows unusual metallic proportions. An attribution to the emergency siege coinage is proposed. (Author)

The historical background of the coinage of Jhabua State is examined. The early coins of the state were overstruck on the coins of Dhar, Ratlam and Sailana States; some were also overstruck on Mughal coins. When Jhabua State issued its own coins, symbols used by the people of the Bhil tribe, the inhabitants of the state, were employed. The most recent coins bear the name of the state in Nagari or Arabic script.

Two hoards of gold repoussé coins and two coins of the same type from a private collection are published. One of the hoards contained 39 coins of Prasannamatra and was found in the village of Riwan in the Raipur district in 1975. The other hoard contained 30 coins: 25 of Mahendraditya; three of the Nala dynasty (two of Bhavadatta and one of Arthapati); two with the names Stambha and Srinandanraja, previously unknown in the coin series. These two rulers may belong to the Nala dynasty. (P.L. Gupta)

A hoard of silver coins was found at Deva in the Kaira District, Gujarat. Only part of the hoard, 58 coins, is presented. Coins from Rudradaman I to Vijayasena are included as well as three coins of Isvaradatta. The contents of the hoard are described and the chronology of Prithvisena, Sanghadaman and Damasena, and the place of Isvaradatta in the dynastic chronology, are discussed. (P.L. Gupta)

520 MIRASHI, V.V. A Coin of (Da)mabhadra from Pauni. JNSI Vol. 40 (1978, publ. 1979) pp. 104-7.

In the light of the coin of Satyabhadra published by A.M. Shastri (see NL 104-520), copper coins previously attributed to Dimbhaga may be the coins of Damabhadra. (P.L. Gupta)

521 MIRASHI, V.V. The Date of Mahakshatrapa Isvaradatta. JNSI Vol. 40 (1978, publ. 1979) pp. 37-41 illus.

The coin of Mahakshatrapa Isvaradatta published by S. Gokhale (see NL 104-498) is discussed. The letter cha is suggested in place of the letter pra read by Gokhale. Cha would stand for the word chaturtha and would, therefore, indicate the regnal year four of the king. The Saka year 154 corresponded to the regnal year four. It is suggested that the coin must be assigned to a ruler of northern Maharashtra. (P.L. Gupta)

The rupee was produced a few months after Aurangzeb had established his headquarters at Sholapur for the annexation of the Bijapur and Golkonda Sultanates (1685-87). It probably formed part of a coinage struck to meet the expenses of the military campaign against the Deccan Sultanates. (Author)

524 MITCHINER, MICHAEL M .B. Oriental Coins and Their Values: Vol. 3. Non-Islamic States and Western Colonies A.D. 600-1979. London, Hawkins 1980. 640 pp. illus.

This volume completes a three-volume survey of Oriental coinage. It is divided into four sections. The first contains coins struck for the Indian States in northern India from the fifth century A.D. to the consolidation of Islamic control in the thirteenth. It continues with coinage struck for the multiplicity of non-Islamic principalities that controlled the Deccan and peninsular India from the beginning of the mediaeval period until the last local coinage was struck during the 1940s. Coinage struck in India, Pakistan and Ceylon for the trading enclaves established by European powers from the early sixteenth century onwards provides the material for the second section which also contains a survey of coinage struck after these regions acquired independence. The countries considered in the third section stretch from Himalayan states such as Nepal and Assam through Tripura and Arakan, to Burma, Thailand and Cambodia. The fourth section deals with the Far East. See also NL 100-391. (Author)

The overstruck coin shows that at least some doits bearing the normal design of the 1786 Westfriesland Vereenidge Oostindische Compagnie issue were struck after the dissolution of the Dutch East India Company on Dec. 31, 1799. Overstriking of the present coin took place no earlier than 1804. (Author)

A class of silver coins with a recumbent bull facing left or right on one side and a trident-like symbol on the other are examined. They bear a legend which has been variously read as Yarikriya, Harikota, Charikote, or Parikote. The legend Harikela is suggested for some of the coins and Harikela is interpreted as the name of a kingdom which lay in the region called Srihatta in the mediaeval period and is now known as the Sylhet area of Bangladesh. The coins are dated to after the seventh century A.D. (P.L. Gupta)

529 MUKHERJEE, BRATINDRA NATH. Some Observations on the Coins of Pattikeda. Journal of the Varendra Research Museum Vol. 4 (Rajshahi, Bangladesh 1975-76) pp. 19-28 illus.

Three hoards of thin die struck coins have a recumbent bull with a legend above on one side, and a trident-like symbol on the other, and were discovered during excavations at Mainamati, Bangladesh. The legend on the coins, read as Pattikeda, Pattikela or Pattikera, is equated with the region of that name known from a manuscript, Burmese Chronicles, and an inscription found at Mainamati. The coins are dated to the eighth century A.D. (P.L. Gupta)

A silver coin bearing the legend of the coins of Iltutmish is published. It has two additional letters at the end of the third line on the reverse which are interpreted as the name Iwad. It is suggested that this coin was struck as an indication of Iwad's submission to Delhi in 622 H.; but it was apparently done in haste to expedite the withdrawal of the Delhi army from Bengal. Note one concerns the lineage of Kshatrapa Siṃhasena. It is argued that the kings Isvaramitra and Siṃhasena, who are known from a terracotta sealing (see NL 96-253), did not belong to the line of Śaka Kshatrapas of Gujarat and Malwa, but were in all probability local rulers of eastern Malwa. Note two argues that the discovery of a small hoard at Dahigaon containing ten coins of the Traikūtaka King Dahrasena is not sufficient evidence for postulating his occupation of Vidarbha. For the views of V.V. Mirashi see NL 94-439 and 104-519. See also NL 104-550. (P.L. Gupta)

Accounts are given of two hoards of English coins. The first (1970), found during construction work at Winsford in Cheshire, consisted of 243 silver coins and three base silver forgeries. The coins date from the reigns of Edward VI, Philip and Mary, Elizabeth I, James I and Charles I. The second hoard, deposited after A.D. 1660, was found during restoration work on a cottage in Burghclere (Hampshire) and contained 167 silver coins from the reigns of Edward VI, Elizabeth I, James I, Charles I and Charles II. The Royal Maundy is a religious service which takes place in England on the Thursday before Easter. At that time specially minted silver coins are distributed to the poor. The origins of the practice in England from its source in the pedilavium tradition dating from Edward II to the monetary gifts begun under the Tudors are presented. Other charities such as daily alms, gate alms and the King's Dole are discussed. See also NL 104-589.

Documents attest that secular rivalry between Pisa and Lucca was occasioned by the similarity in the two cities' coinage. In 1155 Pisa struck coinage similar, but not identical, to that of Lucca. In 1181 the external characteristics of the coinage were modified so that the coins could be more easily differentiated. Two hitherto unknown Pisan documents of 1319 attest that in February Pisa closed her territory to the use of foreign coins, except for the fiorino, and, in March, ratified an accord with Lucca legalizing the circulation of Luccan issues struck according to a model approved by Pisa. Metallic analysis revealed that a Carolingian Louis the Pious penny of Christiana Religio type consisted of lead and bronze instead of the usual silver. The specimen was worn, so identification was not possible. Whether it was made by a contemporary forger or for purposes of ornament is also uncertain. Study of hoards and single finds in the Benelux countries, Germany, Scandinavia and eastern France show that after the Edictum Pistense of 864 the Christiana Religio type almost vanished from monetary circulation although coins of the eleventh century still show some similarity to it. nineteenth century during the enlargement of the port. The find confirms the local origin of this coinage. Certain coins unite a cross and a chrism; others, a chrism and a monogram; still others, a chrism and a name in three lines in the field. Two sovereigns are mentioned: Childebertus and Theodebertus. Two monograms are interpreted as that of the city of Marseille and that of Theodebald, son of Theodebertus. The coinage probably lasted about twenty years, between 530/35 and 550, during the period when Provence passed from Ostrogothic to Frankish domination; this upheaval ended the last vestiges of independence for the ancient city. 701 GALSTER, GEORG. Vikingetids møntfund fra Bornholm [Viking Age hoards from Bornholm]. NNÅ (1977-78) pp. 5-246 illus. English summary.

Forty-eight finds or hoards from the Viking Age are known from Bornholm covering the period 783 to 1106. Finds were made from 1711 to 1939. Of the 5,483 coins found, only 1,960 are still preserved nearly all of which are in the Royal Collection of Coins and Medals in the National Museum of Denmark. Bornholm is much richer in Viking Age finds than other provinces of present day Denmark, but not as rich as the neighboring islands of the Baltic, Öland and, especially, Gotland (Gulland). The hoards are described chronologically. The catalogue also supplies the numeration of the old registers of finds (Fundprotokol). The plates cover Scandinavia, England and Ireland. Only two plates illustrate the coinage of the two latter countries since all specimens have recently been published in the Sylloge of Coins of the British Isles. The German coinage is ordered according to Dannenberg and illustrated on 21 plates. Coins from Bohemia, Poland, Hungary, Italy, Rome and Byzantium found at Bornholm are also illustrated. Two plates show Arabic dirhams. Drawings by the Danish numismatist, L. Laessøe (1808-78), conclude the volume. (Author)

Coins from the mints of Constance, Chur, Zurich and Basel issued during the late tenth and the eleventh centuries have been found in hoards unearthed in Sweden, mainly on the island of Gotland. They form part of a great number of contemporaneous coins minted in Germany which moved north. With the exception of one coin of Geneva, coins from western "Swiss" mints are not represented. Contemporaneous hoards in Switzerland, Germany, Poland, northwestern Russia and the Scandinavian states are catalogued as well. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

It is suggested that Anglo-Irish and Oriental silver coins played a large role in the silver economy of Gotland, while German coins constituted a relatively small part. Evidence is offered that Oriental and Anglo-Irish coins were imported by numerous small importers, while the German coins were primarily imported by a few larger importers.

A version of a lecture delivered at University College, London, on March 2, 1976, is published. The Welsh probably did not strike coins during the Viking Age. Coin hoards and isolated finds do occur, however. The distribution of both hoards and coins is solidly littoral. A short discussion of the finds is given and the conclusion is drawn that all were deposited on the trade route from northwestern England to Ireland and the Isle of Man. (E. Marles)

In the sixteenth century, a large output of testoons, groats and small change from various mints in the Piedmont and Lombardy passed through the valley of Aosta and the valley of the Rhône into the Swiss cantons of Fribourg, Bern, and beyond. Documents in the archives of Bern indicate that many of the pieces were inferior and unacceptable. Except for the inscriptions, the types were quite similar to good money

The coins of Lucca and Valence which circulated in great quantities in the Latin East in the first half of the twelfth century were probably chosen, from among the many western feudal issues available, because the coins of Lucca and Valence were, respectively, the currency of the places of origin of the patriarchs Daimbert of Pisa and Bernard of Valence. The latter type seems to have been more plentiful in the north, the former in the Latin Kingdom. (Author)

The tirolino was imitated at Mantua for a very short period from 1311 by Rinaldo and Bonaventura Bonacolsi. In 1629 Milan experienced a rise in circulation which was perhaps tied to the famine. In 1630 issues were even more abundant in spite of the decrease in the Milanese population as a result of plague and war. The explanation must be the need to acquire food stuffs from other regions. However, the same types and date were used on coins for many years afterwards. (Sara Sorda)

The acquiletta that appears as a countermark on groups of Greek and Roman coins in various public collections including those of Modena, Florence, Milan and Paris has been interpreted as a symbol of the Gonzaga or Este families. As a result, the countermarked coins have been considered as deriving from the Coin Cabinet of Modena or Mantua. It is suggested that the coins constituted the Mantuan collection ceded to Francesco I, Duke of Modena, by Carlo I, Duke of Mantua, in 1628-30 as security for a loan during the struggle against the Holy Roman Empire. Francesco I sold the Gonzaga collection between 1631 and 1701. (Sara Sorda)

A survey of the origins of coinage in the barbaric kingdoms in the fifth and sixth centuries differentiates between two main areas: "Mediterranean," including Italy, North Africa, Provence and southern Burgundy, with a full coinage in all metals; and "Atlantic," including the rest of Gaul and the Iberian peninsula, with a more limited pattern and circulation. In both, the need to issue coinage resulted from the scarcity of Imperial coins. Propaganda or desire for profit derived from minting were only secondary considerations. (Cécile Morrisson)

Of the 515 coin hoards uncovered in Slovakia, 416 finds are composed of Hungarian coins. Of these, 195 finds contain issues from Kremnica. The 195 hoards contained 62,195 coins of which 32,043 pieces were struck at Kremnica (1,176 gold coins, 30,488 silver, 379 copper). Statistical evidence indicates that the Kremnica mint was the most productive in Hungary. (Zdenka Nemeškalová-Jiroudková)

An analysis of 91 hoards of gold coins (fourteenth to nineteenth centuries) found in Slovakia reveals that the highest percentage of issues is Hungarian (1,652 coins in total, 1,1165 of which were struck at Kremnica) with the Netherlands (1,040 pieces) second. Finds from 15 other countries were far fewer. The predominant gold coin in Hungary was evidently a local issue. This observation is supported by the fact that the majority of foreign coinages belonged to one hoard, the one which also contained 1,016 issues from the Netherlands.

Large numbers of small Prussian and Polish coins of inferior quality were intentionally imported into the Silesian territory governed by Austria and exchanged with first quality Austrian coinages to be subsequently exported. This policy and the need for large quantities of money owing to long-lasting wars led Austria to introduce copper coins in 1760. This new coinage was reluctantly accepted. At the end of two years, the quantities of coins were still unsatisfactory. The one year limit accorded by a Patent Act in 1760 for the withdrawal of old coins had, therefore, to be extended as late as October 1, 1765.

The development of the socio-economic structure at Kremnica in the eighteenth century is analyzed. About 1700, ore extraction in the environs of Kremnica was restricted because of low profits and the city population decreased as a result. The revival of extraction in 1730 to 1790 attracted workers from the neighboring villages and the population increased by 11 percent. From the early eighteenth century on, Kremnica was not only a mining city; only one quarter of its inhabitants were employed in the mines or at the mint.

The beginnings of monetary reform in Hungary date to ca. 1314; its role in domestic and foreign trade is traced. The reform led to the foundation of the mint at Kremnica and its gold coinage which, in the succeeding years, reached 400,000-500,000 pieces per year.

Polish coinages had a strong position in the monetary system of sixteenth century Slovakia; their favorable rate of exchange secured gains of up to 15 percent in exchanges. The Polish coins enabled the army, which was stationed in Slovakia in order to prevent the Turkish invasion, to purchase goods advantageously. The local economy, however, suffered since the development of capital as well as of more progressive methods of manufacture and organization stagnated.

Deliveries of Pribram's silver to the mints at Prague and Kutná Hora in the sixteenth century are considered. The deliveries to Kutná Hora were at their highest in 1551 when mining at Pribram increased. A project to establish a mint at Pribram was submitted to royal authorities but was rejected, since the Prague mint would thus have lost nearly all its sources of silver. Because of the monetary reform in 1300, Prague groats had been coined in the Czechoslovak countries at the Kutná Hora mint alone. Literary sources suggest that during the reign of Charles IV (1346-78) coining did not cease in Moravia but continued in the form of small denominations. (Zdenka Nemeškalová-Jiroudková)

German summary.

A new interpretation is given of coins whose basic motif (Austrian coat of arms in the middle of three small connected arches) resembles Austrian pennies. The only differences are the letters in the arches. These used to be interpreted as Austrian issues dating from the late fourteenth century or the first decade of the fifteenth century. All finds of these coins were from the area of the city of Jihlava and must be issues of that city. Another type of these coins, found mainly in southern Bohemia, was struck by the Rožmberk family.

The monetary history of the cities of Riga, Tallinn (Reval), and Tartu (Dorpat) in the years 1211-1346 is delineated using K.R. Pelda's publication (see NL 103-675) of the new excavation material from Latvia as a point of departure. The Livonian bracteates of the fifteenth century are also discussed. These halfpenny (scherf) pieces are not represented in hoards, but are found in excavations of architectural remains in Livonia as well as Finland. A two-sided coin which is known from Finland in three specimens and which may possibly have been struck in Tallinn before 1346 is also presented. (Author)

Russian imitations of the ducat of Mathias Corvinus (1458-90) which have the names of Ivan III and his son, Ivan the Younger, and some first gold pieces of Ivan III, called "korabel'nik" (from the word korabl, meaning ship), recently acquired by the Hermitage are published. The "korabel'nik" is an imitation of the noble of Edward III but in the angles of the cross the lions are replaced by four unicorns. The honorific function of Russian Muscovite gold pieces is defended and their purchasing power denied. New notes concerning the Italian mint masters of the fifteenth century in Moscow are utilized. The symbolic roles of gold and the unicorn are treated. Original gold payments given to the Czar's treasury by the Russian church and the merchants' corporations from the best known cities up until the seventeenth century are described. (Author)

Six Roman Catholic medals with Chinese inscriptions are described and are dated to the period ca. 1850-1900. It is shown that they were made in France for the Vincentians, a French missionary order. Two of these medals were published in a mid-nineteenth century Chinese numismatic work which also illustrated 13 other Catholic medals with European inscriptions and four crucifixes. One of these medals was also related to the Vicentian Fathers, the others are shown to be of Italian origin (some from the Rome mint) dating from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It is demonstrated that these medals were taken to China by Jesuit missionaries before the suppression of that order in 1773. The crosses are also shown to be associated with the Jesuit Fathers. Another medal is shown to have been issued by the representative of the Protestant London Missionary Society in Hong Kong (ca. 1807-34). (Author)

A date for the "Peel Castle Seal" is proposed. Since 1928 the Manx Museum, Douglas, Isle of Man, has had a pair of dies marked G. Lingard, Birmingham, depicting Peel Castle on one side and the Island's three legs emblem and motto on the other. It also has lead medals struck from these. It appears that these were commissioned by the High Bailiff of Peel and sold at a Fancy Fair (Bazaar) held in 1859 on St. Patrick's Isle in aid of the fund for the consolidation of the structures (Peel castle, cathedral, etc.) represented on it. A chivalric and religious order is studied whose inception is connected with the political situation at the beginning of the Thirty Years War. The order, the Ordo Christianae Militiae Virginis, originated in Moravia. Emperor Matthias wanted the representatives of the Catholic nobility to be in the majority in the newly established order so that they might support the imperial policy against the Diet. Documentary evidence concerning the organization and activity of the order is included. (Zdenka Nemeškalová-Jiroudková)

1119 MÍKOVÁ, ZDEŇKA. Karel IV. na medailích [Charles IV on medals]. NListy Vol. 34 No. 1 (1979) pp. 8-21 illus. German summary.

A survey of medals of Charles IV in the Czechoslovak countries from the seventeenth century to the present time is offered. Until the mid-eighteenth century the medals were anonymous idealizations. Since the mid-eighteenth century, medallists have attempted a realistic portrait based on fourteenth century depictions of the emperor.

The history of the currency of the Chinese Soviet Republic (1931-49) can be divided into three periods, corresponding roughly to the growth, expansion and consolidation of the Chinese Communist Party. In the initial phase (1931-35), the currency took the traditional pattern of coins and paper notes; in the second (1936-45), the coins were melted down and the resulting metal was used as a reserve for the issuance of banknotes; in the third (1946-49), both volume and denominations of the currency rose to unprecedented heights due to the heavy fiscal needs of the Red Army in its final campaign for power. Oslo, Universitetsforlaget 1980. 258 pp. illus.

A history and catalogue of the paper money used in Denmark-Norway from the 1600s up to the dissolution of the union in 1814 is presented. Private notes used at the mining works in Norway during the 1600s, the first officially authorized notes of Norway (1695-96) and Denmark (1713-28) and the note issuing banks from 1736 on are covered in the historical section. Counterfeiting of paper money is discussed. Statistical tables document notes issued, withdrawn and in circulation at any time. A listing of laws governing the issuance of paper money supplements the text. The catalogue gives a detailed description of the notes, with photographs of all known types and line drawings of water marks and embossed seals. Total numbers issued with the year, the actual date of issue, the numbering and the signature combinations are indicated. An index of names is included. (Author)

THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Founded 1858 · Incorporated 1865

Broadway Between 155th and 156th Streets
New York, N.Y. 10032

PURPOSES: The Society was founded for the collection and preservation of coins, medals, decorations and paper money and for the investigation of their history and other subjects connected therewith.

MEMBERSHIP: Applications for membership are welcomed from all interested in numismatics. Inquiries regarding membership should be addressed to the Secretary of the Society.

DUES: The annual dues for an Associate Membership are fifteen dollars. Issues of the Notes and Monographs, Museum Notes and Numismatic Literature are distributed to all members.

PUBLICATIONS: The American Numismatic Society Museum Notes is a scholarly journal containing articles on numismatic topics. The Numismatic Notes and Monographs consist of separately issued publications, each on a single topic. Numismatic Studies is a series accommodating works in a larger format. Numismatic Literature, published twice each year, is an international abstract bibliography of the current literature in the profession. The Society is also engaged in the systematic publication of its entire Greek coin collection in Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum: American Numismatic Society.

MUSEUM: The Society maintains a museum located in uptown Manhattan, New York City, which houses its offices, collections and library. Collections embrace coins of all periods from their inception to modern times, medals and decorations. Selections from its cabinets are on display in an exhibition. The library, consisting of about 25,000 volumes, covers all branches of numismatics.

PREFACE

Numismatic Literature is a semiannual survey of current publications in or related to numismatics, with abstracts of their contents. Beginning with NL No. 79 (December 1967), bibliographic information and abstracts have been submitted by an international board of contributing editors, each of whom collects material published in his country. The contents and quality of NL reflect the participation of this editorial board and of individual scholars, whose cooperation can create a truly comprehensive bibliographic tool.

The revisions in format introduced in NL 81 have been maintained, to enable each reader to find and use material in his own field more easily, while benefitting from work published in peripheral fields. Each issue of NL is now paged separately, rather than consecutively within each issue, and an abstract can therefore be identified by the issue number together with the abstract number, for example, 81-1. Most entries are grouped under broad cultural, geographical or typological sections. In addition, the section Technology and Methodology lists works in which recently developed techniques for numismatic study are described or significantly applied. The Greek section correlates with the broad definition of Head's Historia Numorum. At the end of each section is a list of numbered cross references to abstracts with related material in other sections.

Author and subject indices are published at the back of each issue. The author index does not include references to the reviews, which are themselves alphabetically arranged by author. The hoard list is a separate list of abstracts in which reference is made to coin hoards.

Periodical titles are abbreviated whenever possible. A cumulative list of periodical title abbreviations is published in the March issue of even-numbered years. Intervening issues contain a cumulative list of additions. In this way, the list should become a record of the periodical publications in many fields in which numismatic material appears, and a convenient compilation of abbreviations for scholars.

Although NL is a bibliography of current publications, an effort is being made to include notices of somewhat older publications which are not readily available, or are published in languages which readers are not likely to know, and which were not discovered until the institution of the international board of contributing editors.

Comments and suggestions for improvement are welcome, and may be addressed to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society. The Editor thanks all those who have contributed to NL, and hopes that participation will continue to grow.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

The Contributing Editors listed below provide the international cooperation necessary for the publication of Numismatic Literature. Each Contributing Editor has assumed the responsibility for collecting and forwarding to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society titles and abstracts of all works of serious numismatic interest published in his area. In order that NL may offer the most complete, accurate and current coverage possible, each author is strongly urged to prepare an abstract of his own work at the time of publication, and to send it to the Contributing Editor of the country in which the work was published. A guide for the preparation of abstracts follows the list of Contributing Editors.

GUIDE FOR ABSTRACTORS

Entries in Numismatic Literature generally consist of two parts, the bibliographic information and the abstract.

Bibliographic Information

All entries must include the following information:

1. The full name(s) of the author(s)
2. The title of the publication in the original language, but in the Roman alphabet. If the publication is not written in English, French, German or Italian, the original title should be followed by a translation into one of these languages.

If the publication is an article in a journal, the following information must also be given:

3. Volume and/or issue number
4. Date of the journal
5. Date of publication, if it is different from the date of the journal
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is an article in a book of collected works, such as a Festschrift or proceedings of a congress, the following information must also be given:

3. Complete title of the collection
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is a book, the following information must also be given:

3. Edition number and editor's name, if any
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Total number of pages
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the content of the publication is general in nature and does not include specific information or arguments which should be brought to the reader's attention, and the title is fully descriptive of the contents, the bibliographic information alone may be given and the abstract omitted.

The Abstract

Definition. An abstract is a concise, objective summary or description of the content of a publication. It is different from a review in that an abstract does not offer critical comment or additions to the original work.
Length. Abstracts may be from about 50 to 200 words in length, depending upon the importance or complexity of the publication. A long abstract may be desirable when the original publication is not readily available, or is written in a language most readers are not likely to know.
Style and Language. Abstracts should be written in complete sentences. They may be submitted in English, French, German or Italian, but will be published in English. All abstracts must include the typewritten, full name of the abstractor.

Non-Current Titles

The International Editor of Numismatic Literature maintains a control file, grouped by country of publication, of all new title cards entered into the Society's library card catalogue. Cards are removed from this control file as the relevant titles are received from the Contributing Editors. Title cards in the control file are published as they become three years old in order to prevent omission of these titles. Publication of such entries is necessarily limited to bibliographical information only.

NOTE TO CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

Abstracts intended for publication in the September 1981 issue of Numismatic Literature should be received at the editorial office of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway at 155th Street, New York, N.Y. 10032, not later than May 15, 1981.

Five catalogues and corpora are reviewed and comments on the theory and practice of cataloging are offered. It is argued that there is less value to the Roman numismatist than to the student of Greek coinage in a) publication of small collections, however remote; and b) comprehensive illustration, particularly of worn specimens. General comments on the coinage of Augustus are also provided. For publications discussed see NL 96-154, 98-191, 98-218, 100-323, 105-260.
(William E. Metcalf)

11 CAMPBELL, I.C.G. Handy List of Numismatic Terms in French. NI Vol. 14 No. 4 (Apr. 1980) pp. 115, 119.

Ca. 100 terms are noted. For an additional list, see NL 105-12.

12 CAMPBELL, I.C.G. Secondary French Word List of Numismatic Terms. NI Vol. 14 No. 8 (Aug. 1980) pp. 248-50.

A continuation of NL 105-11 is published.

13 CARMICHAEL, HALBERT. "United We Stand": Coins Showing the Subdivisions of a Nation. Num Vol. 92 No. 8 (Aug. 1979) pp. 1653-59 illus., maps.

Nineteenth and twentieth century coins which portray the arms or symbols of all the subdivisions of one nation on a single coin are examined. Two categories are noted: cases where the national coat of arms is a combination of the arms of the smaller units, and coins which show some arrangement of the arms of the smaller units. Coins of Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, South Africa, Rhodesia, Austria, Australia, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Poland and Malaysia are discussed.

This biography of one of the most eminent French chemists of the nineteenth century contains several sections of interest to the numismatist, for J.L. Gay-Lussac was assayer to the Paris Mint from 1829 to 1845 and introduced improvements in the assaying of silver which were widely copied elsewhere. (Philip Grierson)

A survey of Danish treasure trove (Danefae) presented to Queen Margrethe II of Denmark on the occasion of her 40th birthday is published. An introduction by Mogens Ørsnaes summarizes the concept of Danefae from 1241 to modern times. About a quarter of the book deals with coin finds and hoards. Summary articles to accompany the color plates are written by Kirsten Bendixen, Anne Kromann, Olaf Olsen, Fritze Lindahl, C.L. Vetaek and Jørgen Steen Jensen. Among the important finds listed are a gold medallion of Valens (364-78), Viking Age- coin hoards and some hack silver hoards, five hoards dating from the middle of the thirteenth century to the early fifteenth century, and four hoards from the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. The latest hoard is from 1864. (Jørgen Steen Jensen)

The socio-economic structures in communities of the chieftain type are examined in order to elucidate the process of monetization of exchange and the means of payment used. Two types of exchange are differentiated: trade, which was usually carried out by barter; and the more common non-trade, or ceremonial, mode. The latter included distribution of bounty, gifts, marital dues and fines paid for killing or wounding men. Non-trade transactions were often accomplished with gold ring money. Gold and silver finds in Jutland, the Danish islands, continental Sweden and Schleswig-Holstein indicate ceremonial exchanges, while finds in Bornholm, Gotland, Oland and the region of the Malär lake suggest long-distance trade for profit. From the sixteenth century on, samples of forged coins were added to the archive files as they were discovered in circulating money. Coins found in an archival context are of particular historical value because the records make it possible to reconstruct many details of the contemporaneous existence of such coins. New methods of research in this field are explained by examples from the Hessian State Archives at Marburg, and suggestions for cooperation between archivists and numismatists are made. (Author)

Stockholm, Akademilitteratur 1980. 329 pp., illus.

The source material consists mainly of gold and silver solidi and weights and balances from Helgö and Birka in Uppland. Forty weights have been found on Helgö and, in Birka, in the graves and on the site, more than 400 weights have been recovered. Some seventy late Roman and Byzantine solidi and other kinds of gold objects have also been found on Helgö. Laboratory analysis has been used to focus on the methodological problems involved in the study of the material. Ninety-six coins have been subjected to X-ray fluorescence. Structural, numerical and graphical correlation analysis of the finds elucidated the cultural history of the sample and the importance of the introduction of solidi during different periods. Study of the Birka material found in graves shows that weights, found singly (one pair was found as well), were treated as objects of higher value than coins. The weights on Helgö and in Birka are indicative of an economic crisis after the end of the "gold age" during the sixth century. The weights may even be regarded as non-monetary means of payment. were produced are illuminated by scientific study of the number of dies used for a given issue, and the average number of coins struck from a die. An equation derived to calculate approximately the total number of obverse and reverse dies for a given issue, provided a large enough sample of coins is available so that several die links are known, is described. The New Jersey Continental Congress granted authority to several individuals for the striking of some three million coppers. Various mints operated under State charters from 1786 to 1788. Correlations between trace element contents and place of origin were studied using energy-dispersive x-ray fluorescence spectrometry. Each mint appears to have used several different sources of copper. Specimens showing abnormal trace element ratios were identified as overstrikes of earlier English coppers. See also NL 96-408.

E.J.P. Raven's (see NL 81-201) earlier concept of using the index figure (surviving coins per obverse die) to determine missing die probabilities is expanded upon. The mathematical details and the assumptions underlying this relationship are presented including the derivation of a generalized probability theorem for determining the probability of missing dies. Using this theorem and derived properties, the probabilities that within a series, one, two or more full life obverse dies will subsequently appear are presented both in tabular and algebraic formats. The total expected number of missing dies within a particular coinage is then shown to be related closely to the average index figure of the series. (Author)

Galilee. Cambridge, Mass., American Schools of Oriental Research 1980. 89 pp., 16 pls.

An examination of Phoenician coins discovered at the ancient Galilean sites Mieron, Gush Halav, and Khirbet Shemac is published. The 4,000 coins brought to light during seven years of excavation range from the Persian to the Islamic periods, with the greatest number representing the Hasmonean and late Roman periods. The coin finds indicate that the Upper Galilee had close relations with its Phoenician neighbors, especially Tyre, and that this area was under the Tyrian sphere of influence, at least economically, for many years. Problems of chronology and relative weight of the bronze coinage of Lipara are studied by collating the known exemplars. Finding no comparable weight standard in Sicily, the author suggests that the litra was a fiduciary coinage characterized by duodecimal subdivisions and not a fixed weight. A date between 427/413 is proposed for emissions with the head of Hephaestus (interpreted here as Aeolus).

Three arrow-head money hoards were discovered at Jurilovca, near the ancient Greek town of Orgame on the western shore of the Black Sea, in 1918-19, 1957 and 1967. The problem of the origin of the 181 specimens from the first hoard is discussed. They are considered to be issues of the Ionian colonies on the western and northern shores of the Black Sea. They were probably initiated by Histria for the purpose of undertaking exchanges with the local populations in their surrounding region. Their chronology is to be established within the period of the last decades of the sixth century and the first quarter of the fifth century B.C. (Gh. Poenaru Bordea)

Study of coin finds in the countries situated west of the Pontus Euxinus and a statistical investigation of the weight of the gold staters from the western Pontic mints of Odessus, Callatis, Histria and Mesembria elucidate aspects of the chronology of the emissions, and of the relative economic position of the Pontic towns. Most of the pseudo-Alexander staters should be dated from the death of Lysimachus to about the end of the third century B.C. The pseudo-Lysimachus staters follow, and are produced until the time of Mithradates VI Eupator. (Paul Naster)

Four elephants, each with a mahout rider leading a wagon with a seated deity with patera and scepter, appear on the reverse of the sole cistophorus struck in the reign of Caligula. The pro-Augustan iconography of the seven stars and the Zeus-like position of the statue are interpreted as references to Augustus' right to share the great shrine of Zeus Cretagenes at Gortyn.

Suppl. AIIN Vol. 25) (Rome, Istituto Italiano di Numismatica 1979, publ. 1980) pp. 351-58.

The function of bronze coinage as a supplement to coinage in precious metals is reviewed. The appearance for the first time of a regular system of very small coin denominations, and the phenomenon of overvaluation which makes the system of fiduciary coinage so different from a system in which the weight of the metal governs the transaction, are studied.

A private issue of cast coins of Selinus is proposed. Just as in Athens, in the fifth century, the need for a coinage of small denominations was not met at first by the polis, so in Selinus, the sole example in Sicily, private coining may have taken place. A tentative chronology for the cast coinage (435/15) and the struck coinage (415/9) is suggested.

A.R. Bellinger, in The Syrian Tetradrachms of Caracalla and Macrinus, NS 3, 1940, suggested assigning to Heliopolis in Coele-Syria some Imperial silver issues (under Caracalla) whose emblem is a lion surmounted by a star. This attribution is supported and the emblem explained by a Latin inscription found at Heliopolis in 1956, which shows that in the second century Jupiter Heliopolitanus was given an astrological interpretation equating him with Regulus, the brightest star in the constellation Leo, the Lion. The oval shield on coins of Ptolemy II is explained, not as a reference to the victory of Ptolemy over Celtic mercenaries (see NL 102-272), but, as J.N. Svoronos already has (Ta nomismata toū kratoūs ton Ptolemaion [1904-8]), as a dynastic symbol of the Ptolemies connected with their origin. This view is strengthened by the fact that oval shields have been known in Egypt through the ages, that they were depicted on Hydra vases and have been used as votive offerings adorned with fulmen and eagle. According to myth, it was the eagle of Zeus that rescued the young Ptolemy I from the shield on which he had been exposed by his father, Lagus. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

The legend VBERITAS (VBERTAS) AVG, which appears frequently on issues from the middle of the third century to the first twenty years of the fourth century, reflects a promise of future prosperity rather than a celebration of current reality. As such, it is a recurrent theme of Imperial celebration during the era. (Cinzia Cassani)

The Iantinum mint was probably opened at the beginning of 293 for a donativum issue, before Constantius' campaign against Carausius. The craftsmen, who came from Lyons, were transferred afterwards to Trier for the opening of its new mint. (Author)

From 294 to 316 the Lyons mint issued only coins of silvered bronze (folles or nummi). The work begins with an historical survey of the period. The following chapters are devoted to chronology and classification of the coins, the monetary system, metrology, and problems concerning alloys, busts, engravers, legends, coinage organization and die utilization. An appendix contains a study of the continental mint which made unmarked folles engraved by Lyons die-makers. Plates reproduce 1,650 coins. (Author)

Several of the subjects shown on the coinage of Pertinax reflect a developed program of propaganda, certainly not inferior to that of the emperors who preceded him. Though he did develop variants of legends already in use (as, for example, LIBERATIS CIVIBVS, SAECVLO FRVGIFERO), the only new subject was that of Mens Laudana (MENTI LAVDANDAE). This divinity, honored by the lower strata of society and known as the protector of infants, was suitable for a homo novus who did not aspire to call upon Minerva, who was venerated by the principes of higher rank, even Commodus. La riforma monetaria di Nerone nel De Beneficiis di Seneca e in Plinio il Vecchio. RIN Vol. 81 (1979) pp. 63-90, tables. French, English, German summaries.

The financial crisis of the year A.D. 33 was due to the shortage of gold and silver in circulation which, in turn, caused the increase in interest rates and indebtedness to the point of bankruptcy for landowners. The cause of the crisis was Augustus' policy of decreasing issues in precious metals from 8 B.C. on. Pliny reported on the reform of the aureus under Nero and alluded, it is supposed, to the Neronian reduction of the denarius. The reform of the year 64 resulted in money being available for the state and debtors, but a decrease in real capital for the loaners.

Two sections on coinage: the Republic (pp. 45-57) and the Empire (pp. 343-74), are included in this general economic history of ancient Rome. A catalogue of known Hadrianic cistophori from both Asia and Bithynia is accompanied by detailed discussion of types, chronology and attribution. The larger and more varied Asian series is placed in ca. 128-30 and ascribed to over 20 mints; it is entirely overstruck. The Bithynian series, though of the same weight standard, may be slightly later and is freshly-struck. It is argued that the overstriking of the Asian series was dictated by economic rather than political considerations. (Author)

It is maintained that the first silver issue of Rome, which is recorded in the sources as the first issue of the denarius, took place in 269 B.C. Not only was this the first stable and significant issue of silver money, but it was also the first instance of a bimetallic emission, with a fixed ratio between silver and bronze coins (Aes Libralis). 367 PREDA, CONSTANTIN. Callatis. Necropola Romano-Bizantină [Callatis. The Romano-Byzantine necropolis]. Bucharest, Academiei Republicii Socialiste România 1980. 224 pp., illus., maps. German summary.

On pp. 64-72, coins discovered in graves dating from the Roman and Byzantine periods are noted: seven colonial coins from the third century A.D.; 83 Roman Imperial issues from the third through fifth centuries; and a solidus of Justinian I. The finds aid in establishing the chronology of the necropolis as well as the monetary currency at Callatis. (Author)

The coin finds are the usual ones from late-third and fourth-century contexts in Tripolitania. Along with a restricted circulation of other, official coins, there is a large quantity of radiates dating from the first decade of the fourth century. These are largely imitations of the Consecratio coins of Claudius II, produced primarily in unofficial mints. (Sara Sorda)

In coinage emitted on the occasion of an Imperial marriage, the Latin iconography of the dextrarum junctio is added to motives linked to the tributary cult of the emperor (pp. 903-16). Examples included are a sestertius of Antoninus Pius and Faustina I, a solidus of Theodosius II minted in Constantinople in 437, a solidus from 451 representing Marcianus and Pulcheria, a solidus issued on the occasion of the marriage of Anastasius I and Ariadne. Over 300 coins of the mint are catalogued and classified by style, legend and symbol. The survival rate of the coinage seems to be low in comparison with other series, perhaps as low as 1 in 100,000; total output is estimated at ca. 15-45 million pieces for the reign of Justinian. The earlier history of the mint and the circulation of Thessalonian coins are discussed, and an inventory of finds is provided.

433 METCALF, WILLIAM E. Three Seventh-Century Byzantine Gold Hoards. ANSMN Vol. 25 (1980) pp. 87-108, 2 pls., 3 tables.

Three hoards of solidi from Syria, discovered during the mid-1960s, are published and discussed. Their provenances and dates of discovery are as follows: Afrus, February 1965, 29 solidi ending with Phocas; Daphne, September 1965, 64 solidi, 1 semissis, and 1 imitation, ending with Constantine IV; and Damascus, Winter 1964/5, 50 solidi ending with the first reign of Justinian II. On the basis of the inclusion of an Arab imitation in the Daphne hoard, Greek-legend imitations are redated to the 670s and it is suggested that they are of private rather than official utterance. The Damascus hoard also includes a new light-weight solidus of Justinian II. (Author)

The first of a planned three-part study of the circulation of Byzantine coins in various parts of Eastern Europe and the Caucasus is presented. By examining the finds of Byzantine coins in hoards composed overwhelmingly of dirhams and deniers, it is possible to discover certain characteristics of Byzantine coins which circulated in pre-Mongol Russia. Thirty-three hoards of the ninth to twelfth centuries found throughout the territory of old Rus' are studied. (Author) and Chronology. ANSMN Vol. 25 (1980) pp. 109-31, 2 pls., map, 2 tables.

A discussion of Bull/Trisula coins formerly ascribed to Paṭṭikera and the Bengal Chandras (ca. 900-ca. 1045) proposes Harikela as a more likely attribution. The idea that the Arakhan Candras (ca. 370-ca. 600) and the Bengal Chandras were related dynasties is therefore questioned. The importance of Harikela as a political and economic entity during the eighth century is stressed. (Author)

It is suggested that the presence of embrittling elements such as lead and zinc in the alloy used for striking "silver" coins is displayed in the proportion of the surviving specimens damaged by brittle fracture. A table of the proportions of damaged to total specimens for each of the kings Ecgbeorht to Edward the Martyr, with some subdivisions in certain reigns, illustrates wide differences among the types bearing the name of Alfred; it would also be consistent with a deterioration of alloy in the time of Edred and Edwig, and a sudden change to non-brittle alloy with the Reform type of Edgar. covering the recognition of imitations, establishment of correct readings by die comparison, systems of dating, and the social status and mobility of the moneyers. A straightforward correlation between the forms of names on the coins and the dialect area of the mint should not be attempted without consideration of the further factor of the provision of dies from outside the mint's immediate area. It is suggested that the appearance of the southeastern, or Kentish, variant Liof- in Danelaw mints is attributable to dies cut in London or the Southeast. (Author)

Though money circulating in the Seven Years War (1756-63) consisted primarily of inflationary coins, such as the Prussian imitations struck by the Saxon dies found in the conquered mint of Leipzig, there were many private forgers who even forged the inflationary issues. In the landgravate of Hesse-Kassel two official warnings were published (1760, 1762) concerning imitations of Prussian and Saxon 1/3 talers (Ephraimiten), forged 1/6 talers from Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and forged French ecus. The forged coins were kept and filed; they are discussed in detail. The forger of the Mecklenburg coins was arrested and condemned to death; his forgeries are still mistaken for originals by modern coin dealers. (Author)

The former bishopric of Fulda became part of the electorate of Hesse in 1816. On the coins of Hesse the title of a grand-duke of Fulda and the Fulda coat of arms were used to demonstrate the new ruler's sovereignty. While Lower Hesse belonged to the traditional currency region of the taler, in Fulda the florin still remained the customary monetary unit. The various methods undertaken by the Hessian authorities to introduce Lower Hessian monetary standards are traced from archival sources and local newspapers. It finally became impossible to abolish the South German peculiarities in the circulation of money in the Fulda area before the German Imperial currency reform (1871-76). (Author)

Stockholm, Almqvist and Wiksell 1980. 280 pp. 30 tables, 28 charts, 24 maps. English summary.

The most usual late Mediaeval Swedish coin types, bracteates with crowned head or crowned letters, are studied with the purpose of establishing a chronology for these mostly undated pennies. The Swedish-Finnish research project will publish further works on the monetary history of Sweden; this work represents a preliminary study. Ca. 5,000 coins from 263 finds and 16 collections were utilized here. The chronology is based on 120 neutron activation analyses; silver fineness was regarded as a safer criterion for establishing the chronology of groups of coins than study of their weight. The material has also been analysed quantitatively, mostly from a chronological point of view. Distribution of the finds of mainland Swedish, Gotland, Danish, German and Livonian coins has been analyzed, and geographical and chronological differences have emerged from the material. The catalogues I-III (pp. 157-232) have descriptions of finds from Sweden, Åland, Finland, Norway and Denmark, which were partly unpublished.

An Italian, Titus Livius Boratini (1617-81), was the promoter and executor of the copper shilling reform of 1659 in Poland. In 1661 and 1662, he was accused of breeching mint regulations and putting into circulation double the number of shillings allowed, but he cleared himself of the charges. The exact number of coins produced in Crown and Lithuanian mints is known from written sources. This data is compared with finds of copper shillings by applying the Thordeman theory. The figures indicate that T.L. Boratini did exceed the limits of mint production by almost half. (Marta Męclewska)

An examination of the Volga Bulgar dirhams found in Eastern European coin hoards illuminates certain characteristics of their circulation in Mediaeval Rus'. These dirhams circulated in Rus' and the southeastern Baltic area from the 920s to the 1130s, with the most intensive circulation coming between 920 and 989. Volga Bulgar dirhams circulated in eastern, northern, and central Rus' prior to 989; after 989, their circulation was confined to northwestern Rus' and the southeastern Baltic. They did not circulate in southern Rus'. The coins came into circulation soon after their issue, and while many were buried within a decade or so, others remained in circulation for up to 170 years. during the eighteenth century. Their manufacture was officially prohibited in the 1870s. When medal dies cracked at the mints and were replaced by new ones, a small number of dies were copied and kept in anticipation of future orders. These were copied illegally, and often combined in fanciful hybrids. The various groups of novodels are differentiated. (Author)

Archival research provides data on the early history of the mint: documents from the archives of the Berg Collegium, Peter I's mining department, clarify aspects of mint activity in the years 1724 to 1727. The first 1724 ruble appears to have been minted in a temporary mint set up in the building of the Berg Collegium on the Neva river. Several trial pieces, struck in 1726 in connection with a contemplated reform of Russian silver coinage, were produced at the temporary mint, among them two rubles with a portrait of Peter I dated 1722, and those with a portrait of Catherine I and the date 1726. A survey is presented of all the types of silver kopecks minted in Moscow, Pskov and Novgorod during the reign of Ivan the Terrible (1534-84). They are classified by designs, legends, inscriptions, the presence of each type in the hoards buried at different periods in Ivan's reign, and by the evolution of the Czar's portrait style. From the 1550s on, dies for the Moscow kopecks were probably executed by a foreign engraver who left Moscow in 1584 and produced several more dies abroad for making counterfeit kopecks. (Author)

A unique gold piece, a ducat stamped as a donative, is the first Russian coin with the portrait of a Czar - Boris Godunov (1598-1605). The origin of the piece is associated with an episode in Anglo-Russian diplomatic relations in the reign of Czar Feodor Ivanovich. In 1589, the Czar had rejected a miniature gold medal of Queen Elizabeth I with her portrait as a gift unworthy of his rank. In order to avert a diplomatic crisis, Boris Godunov, who had succeeded to the throne, sent back a portrait coin of his own. (Author)

Feudal conditions continued in Mongolia until the beginning of the twentieth century and precluded a great need for money. For barter, measures of worth were ships, tea, cloth or silver bars. Trade with China was based on the Chinese system of weight and utilized their coins and paper bonds. From the eighteenth century on, trade with Russia brought in Hamburgian silver and Russian credit-tickets. After the 1921 Revolution, the Mongolian Bank was started to meet the need for money; in 1925, Mongolian currency was minted. (Marta Męclewska)

MEDALS AND DECORATIONS

800 ABEL, ULF. Carl Milles - form, idé, medaljkonst [Carl Milles - form, idea, medallic art]. Diss. Stockholm 1979. Stockholm, Proprius Förlag 1980. 144 pp. English summary.

Four aspects of the work of Swedish sculptor Carl Milles (1875-1955) are studied. These include: formal problems; motifs and design in the dozen medals which Milles created between 1916 and 1955, and other works associated with the medals; the revitalization of Swedish medallic art which Milles generated, and stylistic analysis of his medals. The fourth part concerns Milles' designs submitted in a competition for the Irish Free State's coinage in 1926, on the advice of W.B. Yeats. (Author)

Design and engraving information pertaining to specific banknotes has been expanded. The number of notes printed and/or issued has been ascribed to many listings which lacked this information in earlier editions. Illustrations of five hitherto unknown interest-bearing notes are included. Hoards of known notes with beginning and ending serial numbers, and those observed to have numbers which suggest that a hoard was intact at one time are footnoted. Current estimated values are included. See also NL 93-781, 104-1170. (Author) study, Nuremburg in the Sixteenth Century, 1966. It is suggested that the well-known unattributed series of small size, wafer-thin pieces found frequently on English sites, showing devices such as a swan, a letter S, a letter H, or a dragon's head, may well have been struck in Nuremberg. 923 BERRY, GEORGE. Tokens of Lead. CM Vol. 17 No. 5 (May 1980) pp. 14-16.

A survey is given of the more important finds of lead and pewter tokens, ranging from the London Wall hoard of 1845 to a recent find of 124 lead pieces recovered in the River Thames at Wallingford and Windsor by divers from London University's Institute of Archaeology. On stylistic grounds, these pieces appear to be of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Reference is made to S.E. Rigold's comprehensive study of Boy Bishop tokens (see NL 102-1278). Finally, evidence is given of crude lead tokens circulating alongside brass tokens of the seventeenth century. (Author)
